Ocala, FL (July 1, 2014) – Dress for success, as the old saying goes, and that is just how the 11-time US National Champion Chester Weber plans to outfit his horses as he shows across Europe. With the CHIO Aachen in his immediate future and the 2014 Alltech FEI World Equestrian Games looming on the horizon, Weber recently resigned with sponsor Horseware Ireland to ensure his team and his horses are decked out in the best. The partnership between Weber and Horseware began just before the 2010 the World Equestrian Games held in Lexington, Kentucky, and has now been renewed for the 2014 Games and through 2015.

A worldwide leader in equestrian products from horse blankets to competition wear, Horseware Ireland is based out of Dundalk, Ireland but, also has offices in the United States, China, and Cambodia. Trusted by equine professionals across the globe, Horseware’s products deliver the durability, design, and performance required for world class equine and human athletes.

“My team cannot compromise on the care of our horses, so we use Horseware blankets, turnouts, coolers and fly sheets from the Rambo, Rhino and Amigo lines to keep them warm, comfortable and dry,” Weber said. Originally joining forces with Weber in 2010, Horseware will also continue to outfit Weber and his managers and grooms with stylish casual jackets, vests and polo shirts for their upcoming events in Germany and France.

“We are excited to support Chester Weber and his horses,” said Tom MacGuinness, owner and founder of Horseware. “Their commitment to excellence in training and competing mirrors the focus Horseware puts on the quality of all our products. We look forward to following continuing to support Chester at Aachen, the World Equestrian Games, and beyond.”

As one of our country’s most driven and decorated competitors, Weber recently accomplished what no other driver has done before when he won the USEF Four-In-Hand National Championship for the eleventh time. Weber currently drives an award-winning team of KWPN geldings comprised of horses owned by Weber and by Jane Forbes Clark. He is currently undefeated in 2014, with wins at the CAIO Saumur, CAI Live Oak International, the Royal Windsor Horse Show, and Kingdom of the Sun CDE.
